4. Identify & critically distinguish different and shared features of emerging religious traditions accounts of good and evil, suffering and success, and the human condition and ways of living, and students' own convictions

Evaluation of student learning:

Citizenship:	Course-long assessment of how students demonstrate religious studies literacy and practice Through their contributions to the class learning environment, that may include such factors as attendance, the amount and manner of class participation, helpfulness to other students' understanding, oral presentations (may be broken out as a separate grading categories), etc.
Homework: /Discussion Board Posting	6 or more short assignments aimed at having the student demonstrate that they did the assigned reading assignment and can address the issues covered in their own words.
Quizzes:	2 or more brief assessments to allow students to demonstrate topical literacy in a specific unit of instruction
Tests:	1 or more longer assessments to allow students to demonstrate topical literacy in covered units of instruction
Examinations:	1 or more class-length assessments to allow students to demonstrate topical practices (and

Essays: literacy) in narrative form as applied to units of instruction; includes one comprehensive final exam 1 or more assessments to allow students to demonstrate philosophical literacy and practices as applied to units of instruction. Well-argued papers are the first goal here, as a demonstration of well-evinced reasoning, though assigning and assessing, in part a research dimension to the assignment is fitting, especially for 100-level courses.

Course Grade Breakdown:

Citizenship	10-15% (not more than this) (includes 'participation')
Homework	10-15%
Quizzes	5-10%
Tests/Exams	30-50% (no one test/exam worth more than 20%)
Essays	30-50% (no one paper worth more than 25%)
Course =	100%

The particular grading breakdown is to be determined by each instructor in line with above and listed clearly in her/his syllabus.
