I. Goals

This course is designed to explore the interrelationships between geographical regions and their inhabitants. Physical features and conditions influence how people act and how they view their place in the world.

Geographical and cultural aspects will be studied in an historical context. Comparisons and contrasts will be made between geographical regions and the social and cultural patterns of their inhabitants.

By analyzing the problems and reform movements of selected regions, students should gain a greater appreciation of the need for international cooperation.

II. Objectives

The student will be able, in class discussion and writing: (1) to identify significant geographical features of selected regions, (2) to discuss the interrelationships of geography and cultural development, and (3) to analyze the influence of the environment on the current situation in each selected region.

III. Teaching Methods

The primary instructional mode is the lecture/recitation format supplemented by slides and films. There will be frequent opportunities for student participation and class discussion.
