Latest Review: Fall 2004

Course Coordinator:
General Objectives:

The student will be able to:

1. Gain historical perspective on some of the great individuals and social-intellectual forces which have influenced U.S. and World History.

2. Discern various shades of thought which are involved in the analysis of complex historical and biographical problems within a humanistic perspective.

3. Make intelligent evaluations of proposed solutions to the problems referred to in #2.

4. Gain a familiarity with the literature, including periodicals, that are relevant to a problem.

5. Learn to use research aids in the libraries, bookstores, and electronically mediated information.

6. Learn how to appreciate and understand the values of the historical method and the history of ideas.

Mode of Instruction:

1. Lecture/Discussion
2. Mediation, where feasible

Rationale:

The multiple focuses of this Special Topics course will contribute to an understanding of the human condition and human behavior. The specific course suggestions given below will stress the individual and social life and ideas in certain specific periods of history. Variable topics will provide more flexibility and greater depth of study than encountered in traditional survey course.

The course coordinator has found that many two year colleges in New Jersey and in other states have already moved significantly into the Special Topics approach. A biographical approach to history is found in special courses offered at Morris County College and at Mattatuck, Connecticut County College. Many two year institutions feature courses on U.S. Social and Cultural History. The culture and life approach is followed in courses at Camden County College, among others.
Articles featured in The History Teacher and The American Historical Review and in the last several years have suggested the topical, biographical and social-intellectual approaches as useful ways of attracting interest to what appears to be a reviving discipline.

Special interest groups in Mercer County, e.g., senior citizen students and other extension students, as well as traditional students have expressed interest in such an approach and in specific topics such as those explored below. Senior Citizen and P.E.N. constituents are among those most interested in history itself and varied history courses. The courses under the Special Topics umbrella would be ideal for such populations but would be also available for traditional student groups. Such courses afford on-campus students opportunities for specialized historical study.

Possible Course Titles Under the Designation, Special Topics in History Series, may include:

I. Great Lives: A Biographical Approach to U.S. and World History

II. The Twenties and Thirties: An Integrated Study of Culture and Life

III. The Forties and Fifties: An Integrated Study of Culture and Life

Course outline material for these three courses is given below.

I. Specific Course Outline: Great Lives
