

Rose Files Lawsuit Against Board

Claims lack of due process, seeks to be reinstated

by Matt Witkowski
Managing Editor

Fired Mercer County Community College President Robert Rose filed a lawsuit early Monday against the college's board of trustees in a move that he and his attorney hope will get him reinstated.

The lawsuit, which includes an order to show cause for Rose's firing, alleges that Rose did not receive due process in the events that led up to his Oct. 25 termination by the board. The lawsuit also claims that Rose suffered irreparable harm as a result of the board's actions.

Kevin Hart, Rose's attorney, said Monday that they hoped that the order to show cause would "force that he be reinstated" – at least to Rose's previous state of being suspended with pay – until a plenary hearing could be held to determine the fate of Rose's employment.

"We are seeking interim relief until a trial can be held," Hart said.

The complaint was filed in Mercer County Superior Court and sent to Rocky Peterson, the board's attorney, Hart said. No court date has been set.

Former MCCC President Robert Rose, left, stands speaking to his wife, center, and MCCC Professor Mary Hayes, right, at an Oct. 25 board of trustees meeting, where the board later voted 9-1 to fire Rose.

The board voted 9-1 to terminate Rose with cause at a special Oct. 25 board meeting. The vote came after nearly four hours of closed-door negotiations between trustees and Rose failed to reach a buyout of the president's contract.

Following the board's decision to fire Rose and a heated exchange between Hart and Peterson, Hart promised a lawsuit and said trustees failed to give Rose due process.

Soon after, many faculty members walked out in protest as trustee Rev. William Coleman explained the board's decision.

Con't ROSE, P3

Recent Rose Timeline

May 2005

Mercer County Executive Brian Hughes announces that Robert Farkas, his inspector general, will investigate allegations of financial misdealings at MCCC involving Rose.

June 2005

MCCC Trustees launch their own investigation of Rose by hiring a forensic accountant. They suspend Rose with pay.

Oct. 18, 2005

Cimino releases reports of Farkas and the forensic accountant. Farkas alleges that Rose cheated the college by improperly billing for lavish parties, as well as overseeing lax financial accounting and other possible violations. Farkas sends his report to county prosecutors for possible criminal sanctions.

Oct. 25, 2005

Citing the Farkas report, trustees fire Rose for cause, with six months' severance pay.

Oct. 31, 2005

Rose files a lawsuit against the board, claiming lack of due process and seeking reinstatement until a hearing can be held.

Halloween Carnival Frightens Cheaters

by Jillian Donchak
Staff Writer

Angels and devils brandishing hammers and axes, a court jester, a donkey and actors humorously depicting deaths of the immoral filled Mercer County Community College's Student Center on Oct. 25.

These peculiar sightings belonged to the Carnival of Horrors, a Halloween-themed event organized by the Student Government Association and several faculty members and staff.

Separating this carnival from typical Halloween events was its underlying message: academic integrity and the horrors of cheating.

While one student stood extolling the virtues of integrity to passersby on "confessor's row," others watched as cheating students met horrible deaths in skits preformed by Professor Kathryn Paluscio's Oral Interpretation class.

One skit depicted a proudly cheating student. Moments later, he was dragged from the stage amid screams from behind the curtain. Brandishing axes, the flamboyant show hosts then explained to the audience that cheaters "must be punished."

The hosts of the Haunted Show, discussing the deadly punishments given to cheaters.

In addition to entertainment, the event, open to all MCCC faculty, staff and students, offered free baked goods, drinks and prizes, as well as games.

Organized by Paluscio, assistant professor of communications, and Danielle Garruba, director of student activities, the carnival was staffed, decorated and planned by nearly 50 student volunteers, in addition to student activities staff, the SGA and several clubs.

Student Jillian Williams, dressed as an angel, said she had fun whacking devils with the "hammer of justice" each time they would encourage cheating.

Stacia Quackenbush, another student performer, said
Con't CARNIVAL, P3

MCCC Officials Shut Down Club Offices

by Michelle Treanor
Editor-In-Chief

On most afternoons the second floor of the Student Center at Mercer County Community College buzzes with activity.

Broadcasts from WMCC, the campus radio station, normally resound through the hallway beside the West Windsor campus bookstore, while students from several clubs come and go through a half-dozen other offices, including that of The College Voice.

But for several days last week all office doors in the hallway were locked, with lights out and virtually no students to be found. So what caused the confusion?

Security officers received a report early last week that someone was using marijuana in SC214, one of the hallway's unlocked offices across from the radio station. By the time officers arrived, the room had been vacated.

"The only information that we received from the security office was that a burned hemp smell was coming from SC214," said John Simone, director of student services.

Campus officials denied that drug use spurred either the temporary lockdown or the change in all office locks. Some offices reopened this week after locks had been changed.

"Drugs were not an issue in this decision," said Danielle Garruba, director of student activities. "The keys haven't been changed in a while, and it needed to be done."

"The idea to change the locks had been considered for some time," Simone said. "This incident put us in a position to move this process along a little quicker."

Garruba noted that the door to SC214, known as the Drumbeat room, is currently inactive and was unable to be locked. Both she and Simone declined to blame the incident on any person or club since anyone could have gained access to the room due to the faulty lock.

Professor Mitch Canter, faculty advisor to the radio club, said that though the lockdown shut down the radio station and confused club members, he supported it.

"The last time they made
Con't CLUBS, P2

College News

News From the Mercer County Community College Campus

Vet Discusses Returning Soldiers' Stress

by Melissa Nini
The College Voice

When Stefanie Pelkey's husband, U.S. Army Capt. Michael John Pelkey, returned in 2003 from a four-month tour of duty in Iraq, she was troubled by his behavior.

She thought they were having marital problems. But in reality, Capt. Pelkey — who had not been physically injured, but had witnessed deaths and experienced the suffering and anxiety typical for front-line soldiers — was suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD). A week after being diagnosed with PTSD, he committed suicide.

Darryll Johnson, a readjustment counselor for the Trenton Vet Center, spoke Oct. 13 at Mercer County Community College about issues that veterans returning home from Iraq must deal with, including PTSD.

Johnson began the lecture by cautioning his audience that he might become emotional, as he himself is an Air Force combat veteran suffering from PTSD.

Veterans routinely have a difficult time readjusting to life at home after fighting in a war, he said. Often, when veterans come home, their minds are still at war.

"When I first returned home in 2004, it took me a couple of months to power down," Johnson said. "Some of us never get out of that mode of execution."

PTSD often occurs after a person has experienced a traumatic event, such as war. The effects can range from mild to debilitating, and can even be deadly if not treated, as with Capt. Pelkey.

The mental disorder can be marked by anxiety, loss of interest in a favored activity, social withdraw and isolation, Johnson said. Flashbacks and intrusive, distressing thoughts and nightmares are also symptoms, he said.

Johnson suggested that people avoid asking questions to veterans about their war experiences.

"A lot of times we don't want to talk about [the war]," he said. "We're trying to move forward with our lives."

Financial problems and substance abuse are common nightmares for some returning veterans, Johnson said. Often, veterans lose their stateside jobs while serving and face financial difficulties upon return.

The Trenton Vet Center is one of four veteran centers in New Jersey and 207 nationwide. The government-established centers offer treatment to veterans who suffer from PTSD and substance abuse, as well as offering readjustment counseling, marriage and family counseling and job services.

The story of Capt. Pelkey was found in Stars and Stripes.

Clubs

Con't from P1

such a wide-scale lock change was a couple of years ago, when someone unlocked the door to the radio station and stole a very expensive audio console," Canter said.

In addition to new locks, campus officials have revised club security policies. From now on, students will be allowed in most club offices only from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

As before, students will be required to obtain room keys from security officers at the Student Center's first-floor information desk. Club advisors will provide security with a list of students allowed in the clubs, and only students so authorized will be given keys.

"Our main concern with all of this is making sure that everyone in the rooms is authorized to be there," Simone said.

"Security guards will be making rounds with the list of names and making sure that any student in a club room is authorized to be there," said Arnold Marx, supervisor of security.

Dean Explores Concept of Student Jury

by Cristal M. Bethea
The College Voice

Mercer County Community College is embarking on a quest to involve students in the decision-making process concerning campus punishment.

While MCCC has a judicial system in place comprised of faculty and administrators, Dr. Dianne Campbell, dean of enrollment and student services, said that she would prefer students to handle some rule violations, including cheating, parking problems and disputes between peers.

Campbell is exploring ways to enact such a system at MCCC.

Under such a system, if students were to violate minor rules and regulations of the college, they would be required to stand before a student judicial committee.

"Playing a role in justice for all is an important value to understand," Campbell said, adding that she believes student participants would gain valuable leadership skills.

Other universities and colleges have similar systems, Campbell said, though she furnished no details.

Students interested in being involved in the judicial process would be required to meet certain standards. They would have to demonstrate a record of good citizenship at MCCC, as well as show that they are serious students with a record of academic accomplishment.

According to Campbell, 10 MCCC students have shown interest in becoming a part of the judicial process.

"By being a part of the student judicial process, I feel that it will allow me to have a greater respect for the school system," said MCCC student Maryam Abd Al-Quddus.

MCCC student Sahra Musa, said, "Students will be comfortable and will be able to express their issues freely because of the peer-to-peer relationship."

Passion Drives MCCC Prof to Write Football History

by Diana Mickolas
The College Voice

Beginning with his love of the Green Bay Packers while he was growing up in Wisconsin, sports history has inspired Craig Coenen from an early age.

Coenen, a Mercer County Community College history professor, has now released a book which turns his football passion into words.

"My love for the Green Bay Packers allowed me to write this book about the evolution of pro football," Coenen said. "My biggest problem in the process was tempering my enthusiasm."

Coenen's book, From Sandlots to the Superbowl, chronicles the history of the National Football League from the early 1920s through 1967. It recounts the history of the league and how it has achieved its identity, from its humble beginnings on sandlots where small-scale games were played on sandlots to the exciting, extravagant spectacles of today's Super Bowl.

Coenen said that he sought to convey the challenges brought to the NFL by the government and other rival leagues, and to illustrate how new technologies have proved highly profitable to the league. He also emphasized how its survival has depended on franchises, from early NFL teams like the Packers, Chicago Bears and New York Giants through the inclusion of teams from rival leagues such as the All-American Football Conference and the American Football League.

Coenen said that he feels fortunate that he was able to write a book on a subject so meaningful to him, and that he hopes that his writing will impact others.

"Eventually, I hope this book will inspire teachers to not only teach students sports history, but urban history," Coenen said.

His manuscript, originally written as his doctorate dissertation at Lehigh University, was rejected first by one publisher. Later, Coenen was unexpectedly contacted by University of Tennessee Press, who gave him a contract in spring 2003. After two years and several revisions, the book was finally published by the University of Texas Press this month.

Coenen plans to publish more books in the future, including at least one that would tie together two of his primary passions. "My big dream is to write one book about my two favorite things: presidents and football," he said.

In addition to his current book, Coenen has edited American Presidential Campaigns and Elections, published in 2003.

From Sandlots to the Superbowl is available now at UTPress.org, online bookstores and your local bookstore by request.

Staff Photo by Diana Mickolas
MCCC Professor Craig Coenen sits with his book, From Sandlots to the Superbowl.

Staff Photo by Matt Witkowski
"I've been giving blood for years," said MCCC Professor Donna Munde, as Phlebotomist Anna Rivera attends to Munde at a blood drive held on Oct. 25 in MCCC's Student Center.

Council Aims To Inspire MCCC Latinos

by Heather Tucubal
Staff Writer

Moses Santizo is forming the Latino Reform Youth Council not just to inform the general Mercer County Community College population about Hispanic heritage.

He also wants to educate and inspire Latinos themselves.

Santizo, 29, a pastor at his local church, first wants the new organization to teach MCCC and other local Hispanics about their own roots and history before they set out to accomplish specific goals.

"We want to make a change, but without identity you can't do that," Santizo said. He described the council as "a place for Latinos to go with their issues. The main focus for this is cultural identity."

The new organization held its second meeting last month and has distributed informational flyers around the West Windsor campus.

Santizo was born in Los Angeles as the son of Guatemalan immigrants. As a young boy, Santizo and his family traveled from California to Guatemala, where they lived for six months before moving back to the United States and settling in Princeton. Santizo's parents were in fact Mestizo, a mix of Spanish colonial and indigenous Central American heritages.

There Santizo became an active member of his church, eventually becoming a pastor. His sister also began taking him to local dance clubs, primarily salsa.

"I began to feel a vibe like I had to get to know more of this," Santizo said. He began to study the Latin American history, culture and politics that helped to create the dance he loved.

After talking with friends, Santizo became inspired to put into practice the knowledge gathered in his research. Together, he and three friends decided that the best place to start a Latino group would be a local college, which is why he is organizing at Mercer.

"In Latin American countries the biggest activists are the students," he said. "Here you don't see that too much."

"I most definitely learned a lot from just one hour of listening to Moses talk," said Paola Cuamatzi, 18, an MCCC freshman from Trenton who attended a start-up meeting.

Santizo said that promoting the study of Hispanic culture to local Latino youth, while helping them gain a sense of responsibility for the culture and history, and becoming a channel for student or community activism for Latino or other social justice causes are among the group's purposes.

Still recruiting members, Santizo hopes more students will show interest in this movement and in people of other cultures. Membership is open to students and non-students of all races who desire to fight for the Latino cause.

"Hopefully later on we'll start working with colleges within inner cities, and we can maybe open up rehabs and shelter or places like that," Santizo said. "This group is done by the youth for the youth."

Staff Photo by Matt Witkowski
On a cool fall day at MCCC, students listen to Moses Santizo speak about issues affecting Latinos.

Distinguished Professor Surveys French Paintings

by Paloma Aleixo
The College Voice

Professor Mel Leipzig used words and slides last week to impress a lecture hall of students with a survey of the masters of three centuries of French painting.

Leipzig, a Mercer County Community College art and art history teacher, spent more than an hour on Oct. 25 examining works of art from masters including Poussin, Caravaggio, Watteau, Delacroix, Millet, Coubert, Manet, Monet, Pissarro, Cezanne, Gauguin and Matisse.

To demonstrate how important France has always been to history of art, Leipzig showed that the oldest paintings were produced on French soil some 15,000 years before Christ. The prehistoric paintings are preserved in sites such as the Lascaux caves in southwestern France.

Leipzig analyzed a series of remarkable productions made by French artists between 1650 and 1950, beginning with Caravaggio's influence over the entire art school of painting in western Europe in the 1700's.

Leipzig performed the survey informally and even expressed a good sense of humor about some characters in the paintings, such as the "ridiculous" Louis XV, as the professor described the king of France.

Students showed high interest when slides with productions by the impressionists and art nouveau painters were presented.

"He masters what he's saying," one attendee said. "It seems he has intimacy with the painters."

Leipzig, who teaches art, teaching painting, and art history, was the first teacher to be awarded Mercer's Distinguished Teaching Award. His works are part of the permanent collections of The Gallery at Mercer, The New Jersey State Museum, The Cooper-Hewitt Museum, the White House and most recently the Whitney Museum in New York City.

The lecture, which took place in a Communications Building lecture hall and teleconferenced to the James Kerney Campus, is part of MCCC Distinguished Lecture Series.

Rose

Con't from P1

The firing, unprecedented in the college's 39-year history, followed the board's Oct. 18 release of a report by Mercer County Inspector General Robert Farkas. The report alleges Rose cheated the college by improperly billing for lavish parties, as well as overseeing lax financial accounting and other possible violations.

Farkas sent his report to county prosecutors to investigate possible criminal violations.

Board of Trustees chairman Anthony Cimino said that while Rose "was a very good cheerleader for the college, he also has an additional responsibility as the CEO, which is to ensure that the college functions properly. There are a number of areas where the college was not functioning properly."

Many faculty members believe that Rose's dismissal was politically motivated and unfair.

Six of 11 trustees have been appointed by County Executive Brian Hughes, a Democrat. It was Hughes and Farkas, his appointee, who initiated an investigation of Rose after receiving tips from college employees who have not been named.

English professor Jim Franklin characterized the Farkas report as "a naked attempt by a few politicians to grab power and undermine the autonomy of the college for their own purposes."

MCCC Faculty Association President Bob Pugh said after the vote, "There are no winners here tonight. We're all losers."

The Faculty Association, a union comprised of 138 MCCC faculty members, is expected at a Nov. 10 meeting to consider a vote of no confidence in Cimino or the entire board. Such a move would be largely symbolic, but members have said it would have political import.

The executive board of the Faculty Association held an emergency meeting Oct. 27 and was scheduled to meet again Nov. 3 to discuss a course of action.

A poll is being circulated to faculty "so that they can weigh in," Pugh said.

Carnival

Con't from P1

that while the theme of the event was stressed, students couldn't be forced into taking the advice of the carnival.

"You can only give advice," she said. "You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink it."

Paluscio said that while she intended the event to be fun, she hoped that the underlying message didn't get lost.

"We developed the carnival as a fun event that nevertheless carried a serious message about the horrors of cheating," she said. "Each participating group stressed this theme. I didn't want anybody to forget why we were there."

Asked if she believed that students understood the purpose of the carnival, Paluscio said that the effects of the carnival weren't intended to be immediate nor sweeping.

"The students we were going after are the ones who have not cheated yet - this just gives them one more reason to consider their actions," Paluscio said.

The SGA has set academic integrity to be the theme of its events held throughout this year.

THE COLLEGE VOICE

The Student Newspaper of
Mercer County Community College Since 1969

EDITORIAL STAFF

MICHELLE TREANOR, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

MATT WITKOWSKI, MANAGING EDITOR

KELLY M. CAPERS, SPORTS EDITOR

EDITORIAL ASSISTANT

MARC DAUBERT

FACULTY ADVISOR

GAVIN MCCORMICK

The College Voice is written and edited by students of MCCC and printed every three weeks, under the advisement of a faculty member. The material printed in The College Voice, be it articles, advertisements or opinion pieces, does not necessarily represent the opinions of the editors, faculty, staff, administration or the board of trustees of the college.

Submit or Write to The College Voice! The College Voice accepts commentaries and classifieds from the students, faculty, staff, and alumni of MCCC for printing in the Voice. Please keep submissions around 400 words for commentaries, 25 words or less for classifieds, and submit them in electronic format, if possible, along with your name, and status at MCCC (major and year, or alumnus). All materials submitted become the property of The Voice, which reserves the right to reject or edit any material based on length, taste or clarity. All readers are encouraged to write to the editors of the Voice, as well as join the staff as an editor or writer. E-mail: mcccvoice@gmail.com, Tel: (609) 586-4800 ext. 3405 MCCC, Room SC218, 1200 Old Trenton Rd., West Windsor, NJ, 08550

Join the Voice!

Sports

Covering the Vikings of Mercer County Community College

Vikings Kick Foes For Fifth Regional Title

by Kelly M. Capers
Sports Editor

Mercer County Community College (MCCC) men's soccer team, rated first in the nation, dominated regional tournament play for the fifth straight year, defeating Essex 3-1 Saturday to capture the Region XIX title and advance to this weekend's Northeast District finals.

The Vikings wrapped up their 2005 regular season with a successful 15-0-1 record, capped by a 10-0 trouncing of Delaware Tech in the regional semifinal and the title win over Essex.

Top-seeded Mercer took control over second-seeded Essex in the first 20 minutes, capped off when Awel Mohammed scored the game's first goal. Freshman Anthony Moy, the tournament's most valuable offensive player, then sent the team into halftime with a 2-0 lead as he scored with just two seconds left in the half.

"I think offensively, the first 20 minutes we were really dangerous and we could have scored three times," Coach Charlie Inverso said. "After that, for the rest of the half up until Anthony's [Moy] goal, I didn't think we were as sharp as we normally are."

Mercer's Tom Fink scored the Vikings' third goal 10 minutes into the second half. That was followed up with a response from Essex's Abdulkarim Sadat, but Mercer held off Essex for the rest of the way. Central defender Jason James was named defensive MVP.

Inverso said the team's defense has been solid, with a backline led by James, Felix Martey and Jacob Rahav in front of stellar goalkeeping by Tom DeStefano.

"Those guys have done a great job for us all year," Inverso said after the game. "I think we could have played better tonight, but having said that, a win is a win, so we are still happy to have the title."

Mercer's win advances them to the four-team Northeast District championship tournament, which it will host Saturday and Sunday at the Mercer soccer stadium. The district title winner will head to the National Junior College Athletic Association national tournament in Tyler, Texas, on Nov. 17-20, where eight teams from around the country will battle for the national title.

Tournament play is nothing new for the Vikings, having played in three straight national championship games, including last year's title win. Heading into the Northeast District tournament ranked first nationally, the Vikings refuse to let winning go to their heads and acknowledge they still have work cut out for them.

"It's going to be hard as the defending champions," said James, a sophomore. "All the teams that will be coming against us, no matter how weak they are, they'll give us a good game. We just have to prepare mentally, physically, train hard and that's it."

Mercer's only blemish this year came Oct. 20 in a 1-1 home tie against Princeton University's junior varsity squad. Mohammed led Region XIX scores with 15 goals, while DeStefano led goalkeepers by giving up just five goals, or 0.4 a game.

The Mercer Men's Soccer team celebrates with their trophy after winning the Region 19 Championship Final on Friday, October 28. Courtesy, MCTV

Lady Vikes Nab 9th Straight Regional Title

by Mark Brehaut and Kelly M. Capers

SEWELL, N.J. — Mercer County Community College (MCCC) women's tennis team brought home its ninth consecutive regional championship this fall and will advance to the national tournament with its sights set on a repeat national championship.

The Lady Vikings dominated the Region XIX tournament at Gloucester County College on Oct. 21 and 22, with four of their top six singles players winning and doubles teams sweeping the top three places. That put Mercer for the ninth straight year atop its National Junior College Athletic Association region, which includes 25 schools from New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Mercer's singles winners included its top-ranked player, Natalia Dabrowska, along with Krystle Duay (4), Siobhan Cahill (5) and Sherry Lin (6). Dabrowska and Jane Senor (7) took first place in doubles, followed by Caitlin Bagdonas (2) and Cahill and Duay and Rachel Hendrickson (3).

Mercer's biggest test of the season will take place next spring at the NJCAA National Championships. The tournament will be held May 6-12 in Tucson, Arizona.

"I believe we are huge favorites to win it all," Coach Marc Vecchiolla said. "This is one of the best teams we've had."

The team completed its 2005 season with a record of 7-0, conquering most opponents with ease. That included three 9-0 shutouts, two against Brookdale Community College and one against County College of Morris. Only rain slowed the Lady Vikings, as weather cancelled four matches.

With its depth of talent and experience, the team looks ready for any challenge that lies ahead.

Two Named Tourney MVPs Women's Soccer Falls Short Of Title

by Kelly M. Capers
Sports Editor

At the conclusion of the Region 19 Men's Soccer final at Mercer's Soccer stadium, the Viking's central defender Jason James (4) and forward Anthony Moy (11) received MVP honors for their outstanding contributions during the title game which resulted in a 3-1 win as Mercer captured the Region 19 championship title.

"I just feel so happy to be selected. You know we go out there and we play hard and I'm just so happy," said James.

This is the second year in a row that James received honors as the most valuable defensive player in a Region 19 title game. As a freshman in 2004 he was also honored as defensive MVP on Oct. 30 when the Vikings beat Essex in a 7-0 game.

While James dominated defensively, Moy helped the team pick up the pace as he kicked the ball deep into the net giving Mercer a second vital goal with only 2 seconds left in the first half.

Surprised by his pick as offensive MVP, Moy said, "I didn't expect it at all because Awel [Mohammed] has a lot of goals and he played well today but he just happened to give me a nice pass there and I beat the defender and shot it. It's just something nice to happen to me."

"It's something special to come in as a first year player and beat this team, since we've had a history with them. And it was a good game to win," said Moy.

by Kelly M. Capers
Sports Editor

Newton, N.J. — The 2005 women's soccer season came to an abrupt end last week as the third-seeded Vikings fell to second-seeded Sussex in a semifinal shootout in the Region XIX tournament.

The loss meant Mercer was unable to defend last year's regional title. Sussex advanced to the regional final.

The Oct. 24 game was tense throughout, and the end of regulation play left the teams tied 1-1. Neither team was able to score in two overtimes, and Sussex finally won the ensuing shootout, 3-0. Mercer's lone goal was scored by freshman Kristina Connors.

The squads went into the game equally matched. The regular season battle between Sussex and Mercer on Oct. 1 produced no winner, as the teams finished in a 3-3 tie after double overtime.

"We pass very well on the ground, but we're just not finishing as well as we should be," said team captain Krystal Schnarr. "When we play we look really good, but we're just not finishing."

Mercer's 2005 season seemed overshadowed by injury as the team constantly had to change its lineup to adjust to injured starters. The Oct. 1 Sussex game alone left the women without two starters for their next game against Ocean County College, which they lost 3-1. But make no mistake, the Lady Vikings fought hard as a team to overcome many obstacles.

The women concluded their regular season with the same record as last year, 10-5-3. The team produced six shutouts, most notably a crushing 8-0 defeat over Middlesex on Sept. 27 followed by a 7-0 Oct. 12 win over Burlington County College.

Such dominant wins proved that the team could be dominant when clicking on all cylinders. But the failure to produce key scores left the Lady Vikings short of their 2005 goals.

CORRECTIONS TO PAST ISSUES

- In Vol 36 edition 1 (Oct. 7, 05), in the caption under the picture titled "Helping Out," it should instead read: "Faculty member Dori Seider, Grants Director Kay Eaton, and Assistant Vice President Susan Zambrio."

We apologize for these errors.

- In our Oct. 26 special edition on President Rose's termination, in the timeline: County Exec. Brian Hughes took office in Jan. 2004, and a judge allowed Hughes to appoint t Nahe new trustees in March 2004.

Join the Voice!