

The Learning Object Repository: What It Is and How to Access It

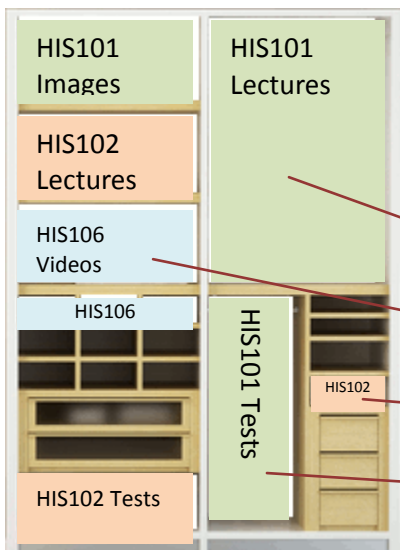

The Learning Object Repository (LOR for short) is your personal online storage space for any and all materials you'll use in your online classes. Think of it as kind of like your closet. In your closet, there's space for your summer clothes, your winter clothes, your in-between season clothes, your shoes, and the clothes that you never wear but can't seem to part with just yet. The Learning Object Repository is basically the same thing, only instead of holding clothes for varying seasons, the LOR holds content for varying courses.

When you put together an outfit, you can take different articles of clothing from different parts of your closet.

The same concept applies when building a course. You can take elements from various parts of your LOR and assemble them to create a spectacular course!

But just like a closet, a disorganized LOR can be a nightmare to manage. So name your files logically and organize them by topic!

Accessing the LOR

You can access your LOR in one of two ways...

#1 - Click on the LOR icon in the power strip.

#2 - Click on the link to your personal LOR in the "Repositories" nugget.

The screenshot shows the Mercer County Community College ANGEL interface. On the left is a vertical power strip with icons for Home, Edit Page, Courses, and Repositories. The main content area has a yellow header with the college name. Below the header are two sections: 'Courses' and 'Repositories'. The 'Courses' section lists five courses with checkboxes, roles, and task status. The 'Repositories' section lists one repository: 'Personal: Batcave Teacher' with a checkbox and role.
